INTRODUCTION

The Arizona Coalition to End Sexual and Domestic Violence (ACESDV) presents the Arizona Domestic Violence Fatality Report. Annually, ACESDV tracks domestic violence related fatalities of women, men, and children in Arizona and has produced fatality reports since 2005. Since 2005, over 1,000 Arizonans have lost their lives in domestic violence related incidents. These tragedies represent a small fraction of those individuals in Arizona who use violence in intimate and familial relationships. They also remind us of the potential for lethality in these relationships.

In 2013, the National Network to End Domestic Violence conducted its annual survey of domestic violence providers and in one day in Arizona 1,796 victims/survivors received services (NNEDV, 2014). Additionally, 187 requests for service went unmet, with 76% of those requests being for emergency shelter or transitional housing (NNEDV, 2014). Additionally, ACESDV’s Legal Advocacy Hotline tracked the number of calls for information and referrals related to family court, protection orders, legal assistance, victims’ rights, safety planning, shelters/safe housing, and more. In 2013 the hotline reported 2,630 calls, with the majority of calls coming from victim/survivors. The numbers in these two reports demonstrate the ongoing need for services for victims/survivors of domestic violence for the purpose of preventing further violence and/or fatalities.

This report focuses on domestic violence related fatalities in calendar year 2013 and identifies characteristics of these cases. In order to influence community and policy decisions, inform responses to domestic violence, and enhance services to Arizonans, we must closely examine the circumstances leading up to and surrounding these fatalities. It is the intent of ACESDV to provide as accurate a description as possible of the main events and circumstances related to each fatality, to help Arizona communities create opportunities for education and intervention, and to encourage community members to support local efforts to prevent and end domestic violence. However, this brief report cannot fully capture the individuality of each victim or the total impact of their loss on the community.
HOW DATA WAS COLLECTED

In 2010, the ACESDV transitioned from using physical clippings from newspapers and other periodicals to Meltwater News, an online media monitoring service. Meltwater News conducts a topical keyword search utilizing Boolean logic, which allows for the combination of keywords with modifiers such as ‘and’, ‘not’ and ‘or’ to further produce additional germane results. The information for this report was gathered from local and national media sources using specific keywords including, but not limited to: violence, shooting, homicide, murder, assault, killed, stabbed, mother, father, brother, sister, husband, wife, boyfriend, girlfriend, uncle, aunt, cousin, teen, and child.

Arizona Revised Statute (A.R.S.) 13-3601 defines domestic violence by the relationship between the victim and defendant (perpetrator) and the type of crime(s) committed. The following is a list of qualifying relationships included in statute:

- The relationship between the victim and the defendant is one of marriage or former marriage or of persons residing or having resided in the same household.
- The victim and the defendant have a child in common.
- The victim or the defendant is pregnant by the other party.
- The victim is related to the defendant or the defendant’s spouse by blood or court order as a parent, grandparent, child, grandchild, brother or sister or by marriage as a parent-in-law, grandparent-in-law, stepchild, step-grandchild, brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
- The victim is a child who resides or has resides in the same household as the defendant and is related by blood to a former spouse of the defendant or to a person who resides or has resides in the same household as the defendant.
- The relationship between the victim and the defendant is currently or was previously a romantic or sexual relationship. The following factors may be considered in determining whether the relationship between the victim and the defendant is currently or was previously a romantic or sexual relationship:
  (a) The type of relationship.
  (b) The length of the relationship.
  (c) The frequency of the interaction between the victim and the defendant.
  (d) If the relationship has terminated, the length of time since the termination.

In Arizona, domestic violence itself is not a crime, but rather it is a tag added to a crime, if the crime committed falls under those listed in A.R.S. § 13-3601 and the persons involved meet the relationship requirements. For instance, an assault on a stranger will be charged as assault, but an assault by a perpetrator against a person with whom they have a specific relationship can be charged as assault per domestic violence. The only exception to this is aggravated domestic violence, which can be charged when a perpetrator commits three acts of domestic violence offenses within a period of eighty-four months (A.R.S. § 13-3601.02). There are currently thirty crimes that can be tagged as domestic violence. This list was expanded in 2010 to include homicide and manslaughter statutes as well as sexual assault, unlawful imprisonment, animal cruelty, and prevention of the use of a telephone in an emergency. Most recently, it was updated to include the unlawful distribution of private images which will be in effect starting July 24th, 2014.

News articles were read, considered to be ‘domestic violence related’ and included in the 2013 list if they met the criteria of the relationship test as outlined in A.R.S. § 13-3601, or if the fatality occurred within the context of domestic violence. This included instances when perpetrators, bystanders, co-workers, friends, neighbors, or others were killed, possibly while attempting to assist or protect another person.

Although Arizona’s laws set specific parameters as to what constitutes domestic violence, victims/survivors, advocates, and researchers have long recognized a more comprehensive definition of domestic violence. This definition recognizes that domestic violence is a pattern of behavior that includes the use or threat of violence and intimidation for the purpose of gaining power and control over another person (Stark, 2007).

While this method of data collection creates a fairly comprehensive list of domestic violence related fatalities, the data contained in this report is limited in a variety of ways.

1. Lack of available and/or reliable data

   Not all domestic violence related incidents or fatalities are reported to law enforcement or receive media coverage. For instance, incidents occurring on Tribal lands or in “Indian country” are not only underreported, but they are not regularly reported on by mainstream media sources. Native women residing on Tribal land experience domestic violence and physical assault at rates which far exceed women of other ethnicities and locations. In fact, estimates of these rates are as much as 50% higher than the next most victimized demographic (U.S. Department of Justice, 2004). At this time, data on violence against women on Tribal lands does not exist since no federal agency, Indian agency, or other organization systematically collects this information.
Two other groups who may be underrepresented in this report are same sex partners and immigrant communities. With regard to same sex partners, if the intimate partner relationship was not identified properly or did not reach media’s attention, it may not have been reported as a domestic violence incident or fatality. As for immigrant communities, domestic violence may go unreported due to a fear of law enforcement, among other reasons. Both of these groups face unique challenges and this report cannot fully capture their experiences.

The scope of this report and its analysis is also limited in instances when the victim’s reported cause of death fails to mention the domestic violence related circumstances that may have led to a fatality. For instance, up to 57% of homeless women report domestic or sexual violence as the immediate cause of their homelessness and some victims may die from conditions associated with living on the street (NNEDV, 2014). However, connecting a victim’s death back to their experiences of domestic violence may be challenging and not always immediately apparent. Additionally, it is difficult to document the link between domestic violence victimization and suicide. Some victims may take their own lives to escape the abuse, and that information would never be reported or made public.

2. Measure used to collect the data
   Since data is collected primarily through electronic news sources, information from other local/state sources such as police reports, databases, etc., is not reflected in this report.

3. Access to people, organizations, and documents
   ACESDV appreciates our partnership with the Federal Bureau of Investigation to collect information on domestic violence related fatalities on Tribal lands. However, because so many cases from Tribal communities were not captured in previous years, this report is unable to compare and discuss trends in this area.
KEY FINDINGS

In 2013, ACESDV tracked 100 domestic violence related incidents, which resulted in at least 125 fatalities. Arizona consistently ranks among the states with the highest homicide rates of women murdered by men; in fact, between 2001 and 2011, Arizona was ranked seven times among the top ten states for highest rates of women murdered by men. Most recently, in 2011, Arizona was ranked fifth in the U.S. for homicide rate among women murdered by men (Violence Policy Institute, 2013).

The following tables provide a snapshot of the numbers and characteristics of victims, perpetrators, methods of fatalities, and more. Some data in the tables may still be unknown due to the nature of how data was collected and what may have been reported on the incident.

AGE AND SEX OF DECEASED

The lives of at least 125 people were lost in the context of domestic violence. Of these there were:

- 52 female victims (41.6%).
- 73 male victims (58.4%).
- 20 child/minor victims (16.3%).
- 3 female and 4 male victims’ ages were unknown or unreleased (5.6%).
- There were more male than female fatalities in each age group, including unknown/unreleased, with the exception of the 60 and older age group.
- The most fatalities by occurred in the 30-49 age group (42).
Intimate Partner Homicide

Intimate partner homicides comprised approximately 41 of the 125 homicides, or 33% of the total homicides in 2013. Of those 18 were a current or former spouse and 22 were a current or former dating partner. These numbers do not reflect intimate partners who may have killed other members of their partner’s family, children they have in common, bystanders, in addition to partner or former partner, or if the intimate partner committed suicide after the homicide. In comparing gender of the fatalities, females comprised 80% of all intimate partner homicides (33) and males comprised 20% (8) of the homicides.

SUICIDE

Suicides made up 18% of all the domestic violence related fatalities reported for 2013. Males overwhelmingly made up the demographic with 92% as opposed to 8% of females who committed suicide. 79% of the suicides we have reported related to domestic violence in 2013 were committed after the person allegedly committed domestic violence homicide.

- 12 men killed their current or former intimate partner before committing suicide
- 1 man killed his father before committing suicide
- 1 man killed his current or former intimate partner and her child before committing suicide
- 1 man killed his former partner’s new partner before committing suicide
  - 4 males and 1 female committed suicide only
- 1 female killed her current or former intimate partner before committing suicide
  - 1 male kill his child before committing suicide
- 1 male killed his current or former intimate partner, child, and brother-in-law before committing suicide
FATALITIES BY METHOD

Gun Violence/Firearms

Firearms continue to be the most common method of homicide in domestic violence cases. 60% of all domestic violence fatalities in 2013 were the result of a firearm, which 50.4% involving the perpetrator’s use of a firearm, and 9.6% being law enforcement’s use of a firearm. Nationally, firearms are the primary weapon utilized by perpetrators in domestic violence homicides (When Men Murder Women, 2013). Access to firearms increased the risk of domestic violence homicides, which is further enhanced when victims/survivors are attempting to leave (Campbell, J.C., Webster, D., Koziol-McLain, J., et al., 2013). Research shows that keeping firearms out of the hands of perpetrators reduces the risk of homicide (Campbell, J.C., et al., 2003a, 2003b). While state and federal law requires that those convicted of felony domestic violence, qualifying misdemeanor domestic violence, or who are the defendant on an Order of Protection, be listed as prohibited possessors, perpetrators are often able to still obtain firearms.
Fatalities occurred throughout 2013, but the data demonstrates that the highest number of deaths occurred in March (22), followed by April (16) and October (13). In the months of June, July, August, and November the number of deaths ranged from 10-11; the remaining months of January, February, May, September, and December showed 4-8 deaths per month. There was an average of over ten domestic violence related fatalities per month (10.42) in Arizona in 2013. In the previous year, there were over 11 domestic violence fatalities per month (11.58).
In 2013, the data shows that two counties, Maricopa County and Pima County, have the highest number of domestic violence related fatalities while four counties had none reported (Graham County, Greenlee County, La Paz County and Santa Cruz County). Maricopa County accounted for approximately 60% of all domestic violence fatalities in Arizona, with more fatalities than the other fourteen counties combined.

While this section of the report mainly identifies geographic information rather than a per capita analysis, consideration was given to the demographics for each county in which domestic violence related fatalities occurred.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE FATALITY REVIEW TEAMS IN ARIZONA

Domestic Violence Fatality Review Teams (DVFRTs) analyze fatalities that can be traced to domestic violence. DVRTs collect information about the parties, the relationship, and systemic involvement to identify gaps in the system and make recommendations to close them. They operate on a “no-blame, no-shame” principle, and instead acknowledge that an imperfect system sometimes leaves victims’ needs unmet.

A.R.S. § 41-198, enacted in 2005, provides confidentiality for the cases reviewed and the local government resolutions enables entities such as law enforcement, prosecution, advocates, defenders, medical personnel, etc. to participate in these reviews for the sake of effecting true community change.

Six of Arizona’s DVFRTs completed case reviews in 2013. One team reviewed twenty-six murder suicides that occurred from 2004 to 2012, three teams reviewed domestic violence homicides, two teams reviewed homicide/suicides, and one team reviewed a near death. Four teams did not complete case reviews as they were either in the process of completing a review or anticipated beginning a review in the near future. Key findings and recommendations from these cases are summarized below.

City of Phoenix DVFRT
Cases Reviewed
- 26 murder-suicide cases that were intimate partner relationships

Key Findings
- From 2004-2012, guns/firearms were used in over half of the domestic violence homicides, and in nearly 90% of murder-suicide cases.
- Victims’ attempts to manage their abusers became the norm in their relationships, but may cloud their judgment of lethality.
- Orders of Protection (OPs) were used infrequently in these cases.
- The presence of other friends or family members did not provide for safety in the murder-suicide cases reviewed.
- A decline in finances appeared to be a factor in the relationship for more than one-fifth of the cases reviewed.
Recommendations
- Increase community awareness activities regarding the dynamics of domestic violence and the resources available to victims of domestic violence
- Provide education for all participants in the court system, family lawyers and victim advocates related to lethality indicators, safety planning, and obtaining OPs.
- Increase education for victims on OPs, the criminal justice system, and safety planning.

Implementation
- A need for increased use of lethality assessments by law enforcement to improve the usage of resources: In June 2011, the Phoenix Police Department implemented a program that reviewed cases for coercive control and grouped cases accordingly. Coercive control is viewed as an indicator of heightened lethality and cases are prioritized accordingly by investigators. The twenty-six murder-suicide cases were evaluated for coercive control, given the information available in reports or through interviews, with half of the cases found to have coercive control behaviors. This research-based protocol is utilized with each domestic violence investigation to evaluation the potential lethality of the case and to connect victims with victim advocates in all cases that contain coercive control.
- Increase the use of forensic medical exams in domestic violence cases: In July 2012, a protocol for forensic medical exams in domestic violence strangulation cases was implemented. More than 452 exams have been provided in the City of Phoenix since that time with a resulting increase in felony case filings from 14% to 62%. In addition, the victims that receive strangulation exams are evaluated for injury and the need for immediate and long-term medical and domestic violence intervention. This protocol was not in effect for the majority of the cases reviewed for and as such is not represented here.

Coconino County DVFRT
Cases Reviewed
- One domestic violence homicide
- One near-fatality

Key Findings
- In the domestic violence homicide case:
  - There was a lengthy history of violence in the relationship and the victim believed that her husband, who also owned guns, would eventually kill her.
Friends and family were unsuccessful in their attempts to convince her to leave the relationship.
The victim and children were financially deprived as a result of the husband’s drinking and drug use.

- In the near-fatality:
  - There was a lengthy history of violence in the family, but little law enforcement intervention or police reports.
  - Both partners were alcohol and drug users, and there may have been a history of mental health issues.

Recommendations
- Misdemeanor domestic violence cases should be treated more seriously on the Navajo Nation. An initial 36-hour detention would allow for a thorough review and appropriate charging.
- Training to ensure that domestic violence incidents are properly identified in the Navajo Police Department data collection system, as well as utilizing the Habitual Offender Statute accompanying the Violence Against Family Act as a deterrent for repeat offenders.
- A victim specialist should work with domestic violence victims to explain the law, the system, and OPs as well as working with surviving family members to provide information and support throughout the prosecution process.
- Ensure that firearms are removed from homes where domestic violence has been documented.
- Enhance collaborative responses and improve the quality and availability of mental health services, and link domestic violence, mental health, and substance abuse treatment when appropriate.
- Increase educational programming in the schools about domestic violence and provide avenues to reach out to children living in violent homes.
- Continue education with first responders to help identify victims of intimate partner violence when responding to victims in their homes and in other settings.
- Recognize the multiple dimensions of domestic violence, including the simultaneous, dual roles of victim and offender that are present in many domestic violence situations. The assumption of a “good guy” and a “bad guy” does not adequately capture the complexity of some domestic violence cases.

Implementation
- Flagstaff Medical Center (FMC) has agreed to conduct screenings for domestic violence on all emergency room admissions and accepted a screening tool. FMC is currently in the training phase for this policy. Members of our team are working with FMC to improve the consistency of screening.

- The Flagstaff Police Department (FPD) developed and is implementing a risk assessment tool that will assess the level of risk in all domestic violence cases. This new instrument gathers important information that was not standardized in previous report writing, such as the presence of children in the home. The Coconino County Sheriff’s Office will adopt a similar tool following the initial implementation phase by FPD.

- The Coconino County Coordinated Community Response Team to Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault compiled a Domestic Violence Survivor’s Handbook and printed shoe cards in English and Spanish with basic information for victims. They also continued to provide training through Northern Arizona and to coordinate the work taking place among various agencies.

- Victim Witness Services of Coconino County now has a triage advocate housed in the FPD who can accompany officers to the scene and provide immediate support to victims. This advocate also provides support to the Coconino County Sheriff’s Department. Victim Witness has opened a satellite office in the Flagstaff City Attorney’s Office to help assist with more efficient victim contact.

- Based on last year’s audit of OPs, FPD has improved the quality of forms used to track orders and to monitor prior histories of violence through I-Leads. Victims are now notified of attempts to serve orders and when orders have been put into effect.

Cochise County-Sierra Vista Regional DVFRT

Cases Reviewed

- One murder-suicide

Key Findings

- Several incidents witnessed by friends, family and coworkers, including physical abuse and stalking, were not reported to law enforcement. This may have been partially due to their lack of knowledge about available resources.

- The victim stayed one night in a domestic violence shelter and believed that the finalization of the divorce would be the “end all” to the problems she was experiencing with her estranged husband.

- The victim may have benefitted from being connected to various resources, such as lethality screening and an OP.

- The victim did stay one night at a local domestic violence shelter. However, it is unknown if a lethality assessment was completed.
Recommendations

- Through the use of local outreach services such as Cochise Victim Awareness, provide domestic violence training to major employers in the county to raise awareness of lethality indicators, as well as provide resources for friends, family and coworkers of victims.
- Provide training in the areas of lethality screening, post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), safety planning and investigations to local groups and agencies doing domestic violence related work.

Implementation

- Cochise Victim Awareness has committed to providing informational presentations to major employers in Cochise County. Plans have been made to begin this in 2014.
- The in-service and roll call training conducted within the Sierra Vista Police Department (SVPD) as a result of last year’s recommendation is being expanded to a regional level. In March 2014, the SVPD hosted “Advanced Domestic Violence Investigations”, an eight hour course that covered lethality assessment, strangulation, and stalking. Additionally, a subject matter expert in the area of PTSD will be teaching a module on PTSD and domestic violence. Entities throughout southern/southeastern Arizona will be invited to this training event.

East Valley Police Chiefs Association DVFRT

Cases Reviewed

- One murder-suicide

Key Findings

- There is currently no “one stop shop” for domestic violence victims to receive information and referral services in Maricopa County.
- Police officers responding to domestic violence incidents may be unaware of previous calls for service or contacts from other jurisdictions with the suspect at the time of the incident.
- Police officers responding to domestic violence incidents are inconsistent with how to assess a victim’s risk of future lethal violence against them.

Recommendations

- Creating an awareness campaign to educate the public about the 2-1-1 services and other 24-hour hotlines, other than 911.
• Utilization of regional information systems (CopLink, internal records management databases, etc.) by police agencies to research the parties involved at the time of, or prior to leaving for, the domestic violence call for service.
• Training for police officers to utilize a domestic violence lethality assessment and conduct immediate follow-up, if necessary.

Mohave County DVFRT
Cases Reviewed
• None completed, anticipated that team will begin meeting and actively participating in review of closed cases

Navajo County DVFRT
Cases Reviewed
• None completed, anticipated that team will continue first case review

Pima County DVFRT
Cases Reviewed
• One domestic violence homicide

Key Findings
• Unclear if any domestic violence services were offered to the victim.
• The victim endured the perpetrator’s threats and manipulation while he was incarcerated due to the Department of Corrections’ (DOC) limitations in monitoring inmates’ outside communication.
• The perpetrator was never mandated to attend batterer intervention services.

Recommendations
• Pima County develops community education for victims of abuse across the socio-economic spectrum.
• Ongoing training regarding prosecution and sentencing of domestic violence cases.
• DOC to develop a system of prohibiting inmates from contacting victims.

Implementation
• Community awareness and education
  o Emerge! Center Against Domestic Abuse is implementing a domestic violence education program through Tucson Medical Center to reach across the socio-economic spectrum.
The Pima County Sheriff’s Department will develop a domestic violence training program for employers and conducts multi-disciplinary training programs for employers.

- Training for prosecutors
  - The Pima County Attorney’s Office will encourage all prosecutors in the domestic violence unit to incorporate a term of probation following DOC incarceration to ensure defendants receive batter intervention services, as well as supervision following incarceration.

- DOC monitoring
  - The Pima County DVFRT will present their report and findings to the DOC and request a review of policies prohibiting inmates from contacting victims.

West Valley DVFRT

Yuma County Domestic Violence Fatality Review Team

Cases Reviewed

- One domestic violence homicide

Key Findings

- Friends and family knew that the perpetrator was controlling and “aggressive”. They may have been pressured or otherwise influenced to not tell, or they may not have known it was domestic violence and how to respond.

- The victim came into contact with the mental health system. The provider(s) may not have recognized the intersection of domestic violence and depression, or may not have known the available resources in order to provide a referral to the victim.

Recommendations

- Conduct outreach activities to outlying and “self-reliant” communities.

- Incorporate domestic violence screening into behavioral health assessments.
• Partnering with schools so that information about domestic violence can be made available to students and obtained in a confidential manner.

The Arizona Coalition to End Sexual and Domestic Violence commends our state’s DVFRTs and surrounding communities in working together to examine these cases. By opening various agencies’ files and records to investigate and explore domestic violence fatalities and near-deaths/fatalities, we can continue the work of creating/improving system responses to domestic violence in our communities.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Several themes emerged from the findings and recommendations of the fatality review teams across the state. This section will serve as a summation of the recommendations from the review teams and will look at the common themes among the various teams.

EDUCATION/TRAINING

Nearly every review team identified education and training as a whole as one of the recommendation at the conclusion of the case review. Many of the review teams included specific examples of who needed to be trained and what type of training they needed. The spectrum ranged from training to the court system on domestic violence, education for law enforcement, training and education in the schools on domestic violence, as well as, specific education on lethality assessments. Additionally there were recommendations to increased education for victims/survivors on protective orders, the court system, safety planning, and support services.

COMMUNITY AWARENESS

Similar to education and training, community awareness of domestic violence was a common trend in the recommendations from the review teams. Community awareness recommendations ranged from the need for more activities and events to provide resources on domestic violence, community awareness events at schools to provide more information about domestic violence to that demographic. The overall theme of community awareness is to bring more attention to the issue and ensuring that all victims/survivors know where to get help should they need it.
MENTAL HEALTH/BEHAVIORAL HEALTH

Identified in a few of review teams recommendations were specific considerations for mental health/behavioral health services and collaboration. Particularly the recommendations highlight the need for those interacting with victims/survivors to understand the link between mental health and domestic violence and the need to be more trauma-informed. One review team in particular recommended that domestic violence screening be added to behavioral health assessments.

FIREARMS

While only one review team mentioned the need for removal of firearms from domestic violence perpetrators, it is important to note that the removal of firearms continues to be an ongoing systemic issue in domestic violence cases. As was already stated in the section on firearms, if a felony act of domestic violence, qualifying misdemeanor domestic violence act, or there is an active order of protection in place, the perpetrator of domestic violence is a prohibited possessor. There still remain issues as to who is to reform the firearms from the perpetrator and how the removal of firearms can be enforced. Identifying how to enforce the firearm prohibition was a recommendation by a review team last year and may continue to be recommendations of teams until policy or legislative change occurs.
